MARCH SAINT: While the very popular saint this month has long been associated as the Apostle to Ireland he certainly isn't the only person responsible for spreading the Gospel there. But nonetheless St. Patrick is much beloved by Irish and non-Irish.

Ironically, Patrick was actually British by birth, whose father was a town councilor and deacon. Patrick's grandfather was a priest. As a young man Patrick was captured by Irish pirates and enslaved for six years. During his servitude as a shepherd Patrick prayed, a change from his earlier days when he confesses he "knew not the true God." Eventually he escaped and managed to charm sailors to take him aboard. After quite an adventure Patrick eventually returned home a changed man. He soon trained for the priesthood and learned the scriptures in Latin, in a rudimentary way however.

Through contact with Gaul and perhaps even the papacy Patrick was soon appointed bishop in Ireland, ca. 435, despite some opposition. Beginning in the north Patrick established a see at Armagh and later in the west and east. From Armagh, Patrick set out on missionary journeys.

Patrick's writings reveal a simple yet sincere devotion and pastoral zeal. He was unequivocal in his desire to eradicate pagan worship and focus solely on Christ. In his old age Patrick saw himself as an unlearned exile, former slave and fugitive who trusted in God alone. What's known about Patrick historically far surpasses the Patrick of legends. Regrettably places which we associate with Patrick, including Downpatrick and Croagh Patrick cannot be entirely verified. Even his death and burial site remain uncertain.

All this notwithstanding, St. Patrick will continue to be among the most popular saints, especially in Ireland where he is the patron and celebrated as such. Thankfully his cult spread to Europe by Irish monks and later encouraged by the Normans in Ireland. Devotion to Patrick spread to Australia and the United States via immigration most certainly. In 1809 the 1st cathedral in New York on Mulberry Street was dedicated to St. Patrick as was the second Cathedral begun in 1858. St. Patrick is also one of the patrons of the diocese of Paterson. Thus we at St. Mary's Abbey (where many of the monks have Irish roots) are able to put aside for a day our Lenten observance on March 17th to celebrate with some festivity, gratefully! Incidentally March 17, 1780 is the date of the 1st St. Patrick's Day celebration in the United State, right here in Morristown, thanks to George Washington!
